Wenninghoff's Farm

Wenninghoff's Farm and Farmers' Market, located in Omaha, NE is owned by Amy & Paul Wenninghoff.

Our farm, in the center of Omaha, has been growing produce since 1928. As the city grew around us, our customer base has expanded to allow us to remain open 7 days a week from May through October. Since this is our sole source of income, our family is quite dedicated to customer service and offering the best produce available at our farm store. We sell on the farm and at the following markets: Aksarben, Wohlners Midtown Market, Downtown, village Pointe and the Charles Drew Center.

Wenninghoff's Farm started growing produce in 1928 and they have been open to the public on a daily basis since 1956. They think local food/produce is important because:
Buying local gives you the opportunity to buy the freshest produce possible.

Wenninghoff's has been a member of Buy Fresh Buy Local Nebraska for several years. [We chose to become a member of BFBLN] To enhance our farm's exposure to people who want food directly from the farmer [and] also to increase awareness about our CSA.

They said BFBLN has helped their farm/market in several ways through the years:
As the population has shifted from rural to urban development, many consumers have forgotten where their food comes from. They forgot that it grows in fields instead of in the supermarket. BFBLN has helped the consumer remember to not take food for granted. BBLN has helped the consumer connect with the farmer and understand more of what is involved in getting the food to the table.

For more information on Wenninghoff's-visit their website at: www.wenninghoff.com or Facebook page: http://www.facebook.com/wenninghofffarm.

--Information provided by Amy Wenninghof