

Quail Acres Farm

Quail Acres Farm, located in Falls City, Nebraska, is owned and operated by Robert White.

In 2011 I decided to return to the family farm. I have been reading about sustainability and organic farming and have become passionate about right stewardship of the land, the animals in my care and the food I grow. You can always be sure that Quail Acres's products are raised in the most natural and holistic ways possible, without chemicals, hormones or antibiotics.

I currently have available whole, pastured broiler/fryer chickens, which are raised on grass forage pasture, receive non gmo grains and are processed in a USDA-inspected facility. We also have naturally raised vegetables this year including lettuce mix, beets, red, yellow, white and bunching onions, herbs, kale, chard, radishes, and spinach, cilantro, dill weed, parsley, oregano, thyme, fennel, green, yellow and purple beans, sweet potatoes, fingerling, red, blue and yukon gold potatoes, okra, zucchini, watermelon, cantaloupe, muskmelon, sweet corn, cabbage, tomatoes, cucumbers, radicchio, buttercup squash, spaghetti squash, pumpkins, and gourds. I also have a flock of about 60 Rhode Island Red laying hens that are free range and they are laying over 4 dozen eggs a week.

I have a high tunnel and will continue to have tomatoes for a couple of more months yet. I am starting to get more fall crops planted now such as spinach, carrots, beets, lettuce, chard, kale, cabbage, bunching onions, and broccoli. I hope to be able to continue to have produce available on into November and start planting again in February. Some future offerings include duck eggs, Shetland sheep wool (for spinners), walnuts, pecans, table grapes, honey.

I feel local food/products are important because the way they are produced and how they are taken to market is more sustainable. It's been great to connect with people on a person level in the process of growing and selling food. My buyers get to know me; they interact with the person that's growing their food. It really personalizes the food purchasing and cooking experience.

Quail Acres Farm is a new member of Buy Fresh Buy Local Nebraska.

They joined to take advantage of the support and marketing of the organization and other members. BFBLN has helped them being an advocate for local foods.

--Information provided by Robert White

